1

What is the Issue?

- ◆ Just like people in general population, most people with intellectual and/or developmental disabilities are law-abiding citizens
- ◆ Nonetheless, individuals with I/DD can become involved as defendants accused of crimes, and as victims or witnesses to crime.

2

According to CareerBuilder.com:

- ◆ 65 million Americans have some variety of criminal offense record. Over 5.6 million Americans—nearly 1 in 40 adults—were in prison or had served time there, and almost 4 million other Americans were under supervision in the community— probation or parole.
- ◆ 51 % of employers have hired someone with criminal record when legally able to do so.
- ◆ Businesses that have hired ex-offenders have been pleased with their work and have found them to be good productive employees.

3

- ◆ While the use of criminal background checks has soared, the share of the U.S. population with criminal records has risen to over one in four adults.
- ◆ The National Employment Law Project reported that over 90% of companies use background checks in their hiring decisions.
- ◆ This impacts people with I/DD even more.

4

Criminal Justice Advocacy Program

- ◆ Program identifies and outlines community based services which can be incorporated into probation conditions for defendants with developmental disabilities.
- ◆ The goal is to increase success in the community.
- ◆ The CJAP serves as the liaison between the criminal justice and human service systems.
- ◆ Experience with people with I/DD and criminal involvement.

5

Overview of Offender w/ I/DD

- ◆ Male
- ◆ Mild to Moderate Intellectual Disability or Autism Spectrum Disorder most common
- ◆ Unemployed
- ◆ Aware of and try to hide disability
- ◆ Ages 20 – 40
- ◆ Sex Offenses

6

More Obstacles than non-I/DD

- ◆ Offenders w/ I/DD more likely to plead guilty to original charges than non-disabled cohorts
- ◆ More likely to spend more time incarcerated
- ◆ More likely to be denied parole

7
